Smart Choices with Money

Mariam is a university student who wants to manage her money wisely. She receives a small income from her part-time job, but she finds it difficult to make ends meet. Her tuition fees, books, and daily expenses are expensive. Sometimes, she feels broke because she spends too much money on things she does not really need.

One day, Mariam decides to prepare a monthly budget. She wants to put aside some money for emergencies. Her friend advises her to apply for a scholarship because it can help her pay her university fees. Alternatively, she can take a student loan, but she must repay the money later. Mariam understands that borrowing money is a serious responsibility.

Mariam also notices that many students buy expensive products because of advertising. Some famous brands cost an arm and a leg, even when cheaper products have the same quality. She learns that marketing can influence consumers and encourage them to buy things they do not need.

In her psychology class, Mariam studies how the human brain affects shopping decisions. She learns that advertisements use pictures, colours, and emotions to attract attention. However, smart consumers compare prices and think carefully before buying products.

After a few months, Mariam becomes better at managing her money. She spends less, saves more, and avoids unnecessary borrowing. She learns that good advice, careful planning, and responsible spending are important for financial success.
